

WEDNESDAY WISDOM

A Parenting Plan Needs Real Times

Vague schedules create conflict. Specific times create predictability for children.

WEEKDAYS

Write school mornings, after-school care, and bedtime into the plan.

WEEKENDS

Set pickup windows so Saturday does not become a negotiation.

HOLIDAYS

Decide the calendar early so children are not left in the middle.

Clear details today prevent confusion around tomorrow's handoffs.

FAMILY FRIDAYS

Children Should Not Carry Adult Messages

Kids stay steadier when parents talk to each other, not through the child.

TEXTS

Keep adult logistics on a parent-to-parent channel.

PICKUPS

Handle schedule changes directly, before a child is left waiting.

SCHOOL

Share notices with both homes so the child is not the messenger.

Adult conversations belong with the adults.

SATURDAY SOLUTIONS

Write Down the Weekend Exchange Plan

Saturday handoffs go smoother when time, place, and a backup are already agreed.

TIME

Confirm the exact window, not “sometime in the afternoon.”

PLACE

Choose one regular spot both homes can rely on.

BACKUP

Name the rain plan so a delay does not turn into a dispute.

A written exchange plan keeps the weekend about the child.
