Prepared for Dillon Mohr · July 15, 2026

Executive handoff

Outcome: The social campaign and website growth system are implemented locally, documented, tested, and ready for production configuration. No public deployment or social publishing has occurred.

What is built

- Social-first “Start Here” landing page
- Three music previews and fan capture
- Audience, pre-save, and released campaign states
- Consent-aware analytics and UTM attribution
- Brevo double opt-in subscription endpoint
- Privacy, security, and mobile accessibility work

What is packaged

- 30-day platform publishing calendar
- Weekly KPI scorecard
- Profile-link and UTM map
- Capture-to-publishing handoff
- 35 static assets and 27 motion assets
- Original electronic press kit

Production activation

1. Add Brevo credentials, list, and double opt-in template IDs.
2. Add verified artist social-profile and streaming URLs.
3. Add optional GA4, Meta Pixel, and Plausible IDs.
4. Run final staging signup and analytics checks.
5. Approve the production website deployment.
6. Approve the first scheduled social publishing batch.

The implementation fails closed if email infrastructure is unavailable, so subscriber consent is never falsely confirmed.

Production publication: not performed

Complete

- Full social conversion hub at `immohrtal-site/start.html`.
- Typed audience-building, pre-save, and released states.
- Three approved 30-second preview players.
- Consent-gated GA4, Meta Pixel, and Plausible loading.
- Session UTM capture attached to measurement and signup requests.
- Brevo double-opt-in Netlify Function with a Netlify Forms backup.
- Privacy page and security headers.
- Updated navigation, footer, sitemap generation, and deployment documentation.
- Thirty-day calendar, weekly scorecard, tracked profile URLs, and weekly capture handoff.
- Six subscription API tests and a successful production build.
- Responsive verification at 390 px and desktop widths.

Required before a production deployment

1. Create or confirm the Brevo early-listener list and double-opt-in template.
2. Add the server-only Netlify values from `immohrtal-site/.env.example`.
3. Add only the analytics IDs Dillon wants active.
4. Deploy a private Netlify preview and complete one real double-opt-in test.
5. Verify the actual `@immohrtal` profile URLs before adding them to `album.ts`.
6. Obtain Dillon's approval for the production deployment.

Required before release mode

- Lead single
- Distributor
- Release date
- Pre-save URL
- Spotify and Apple artist URLs
- Approved public lyrics

Until those facts are real, the site correctly remains in `audience-building` mode.

Weekly capture handoff

IMMOHRTAL Weekly Capture Handoff

Record one 45 to 60 minute vertical phone batch each week. Upload the original files without platform watermarks.

Dillon captures

- Five direct-to-camera hooks, each delivered twice.
- One honest Delusion Diary answer lasting 60 to 120 seconds.
- One audience question answered three different ways.
- One first-listen reaction with clear permission from everyone shown.
- Five workday shots and five after-hours studio shots.
- Notebook, microphone, screen, headphones, driving, Erie, or Pittsburgh B roll.
- One relationship story involving Keev, Mac's influence, the 814, fatherhood, or starting late.
- Five seconds of clean room tone.

Recording rules

- Shoot vertically at 1080p or higher.

- Use a window or soft front light.
- Keep the phone at eye level for direct-to-camera clips.
- Leave one second before speaking and two seconds after finishing.
- Hold B roll for at least eight seconds.
- Do not use unapproved lyrics or expose unreleased full masters.
- Mark family footage APPROVED or PRIVATE before upload.

Codex returns

- Four vertical discovery edit briefs.
- Two supporting feed or carousel posts.
- Platform-specific captions, titles, CTAs, and UTMs.
- One live-session outline.
- A scheduler-ready calendar update.
- Three controlled variants of the prior week's winning post.
- The updated performance scorecard and next-week recommendation.

Nothing is published, emailed, advertised, or pitched until Dillon approves the final queue.

Current-state checks

- The artist site, press page, blog page, and `llms.txt` returned HTTP 200 on 2026-07-15.
- The canonical site is `https://immohrtal-site.netlify.app`.
- Social and streaming URLs remain `null` in `immohrtal-site/src/content/album.ts` on remote `main`.
- Analytics events are coded but inactive until IDs are added. The planned events are `preview_play`, `gate_open`, `gate_signup`, and `epk_download`.
- The existing calendar begins 2026-07-13. Its first two dates have elapsed, so it should not be imported unchanged.
- Auto-transcribed lyrics are not publication-safe until Dillon approves the exact words.

Preservation note

The existing local `dillon-os` checkout was not reset, switched, or cleaned. It contains unrelated user work and remains untouched beyond a safe `git fetch origin main`.

Full social scale plan

IMMOHRTAL Social Launch and Scale Plan v1

Prepared for: Dillon Mohr / IMMOHRTAL

Date: 2026-07-15

Status: Execution-ready draft. No accounts have been posted to and no ads have been launched.

1. Executive decision

The campaign does not need more polished assets before it starts. It needs a human-led distribution engine.

The strongest idea is already in the source material: a chief marketing officer who spent years marketing everybody else finally tries to earn attention for the rap album he was afraid to release. That is the series. The music, the Erie and Pittsburgh identity, King Keev, Mac Miller's influence, fatherhood, and the day-job versus night-booth split give the series depth.

The existing 35 statics, 6 Split Series cards, 27 motion assets, 8 real photos, EPK, website, blog, and email sequence are the supporting library. They provide consistency, proof, and conversion surfaces. They should not be the majority of discovery posts. A waveform is packaging. Dillon's face, voice, choices, uncertainty, and listener reactions are the content people can attach themselves to.

The three big bets

1. Make the launch a public experiment, not a string of announcements. The recurring promise is: watch a CMO try to become a rapper for real and show the work honestly. Every week needs Delusion Diary, First Listen, The Split, Making It, and 814 or Pittsburgh stories.
2. Use one production engine across platforms, but publish natively. Record one useful 45 to 60 minute batch each week. Turn it into four strong vertical videos, two supporting feed posts, daily story material, one live session, and platform-specific text. Cross-post the idea, not a watermarked export or identical caption.
3. Scale only proven messages. Run organic creative tests first. Put money behind the top quartile of posts based on retention, shares, profile visits, and gate signups. Do not pay to rescue weak content or buy playlist placement.

The next 90 days in one sentence

Build a recognizable creator series, convert attention into an owned email audience, turn the first single into the first release event, and use weekly performance data to multiply only the hooks and stories that earn real listener action.

2. What we found

The verified source is `dillonmohr8777/dillon-os`, remote `main`, at commit `6aa686b09a8131991b5eb91b82db9ea1350e32fb`. A clean review copy is included in this workspace under `02_Campaigns/IMMOHRTAL/`.

The good news:

- Positioning is unusually clear: the delusion is the point and IF NOT NOW, WHEN.
- The brand system is distinctive and complete enough to be recognizable.
- There is enough finished supporting material for at least two months.
- The website, press page, blog, preview audio, form capture, and press kit are live.
- The CMO, Erie, Pittsburgh, Mac, King Keev, and fatherhood stories create several credible audience doors into the same artist.

The gaps that matter:

- Social and streaming links are still null in the site's canonical content file.
- No release date, pre-save URL, distributor status, Spotify artist profile, or Apple artist profile is confirmed in the materials.
- Site analytics events exist but are dark until measurement IDs are added.
- The current posting schedule began July 13 and cannot be imported unchanged on July 15.
- Its content mix leans too heavily on beat visualizers and waveform cards.
- Most scheduled captions do not use the required campaign closer.
- The email welcome sequence is written, but there is no proof it is active in an ESP.
- Lyrics remain auto-transcribed drafts and cannot be published safely yet.
- There are no confirmed baseline numbers for followers, average views, list size, saves, streams, budget, or weekly production capacity.

The shape is strong brand and production, weak distribution and measurement. That is a good problem. We are not inventing an identity. We are making the existing identity move.

3. Strategic frame

What IMMOHRTAL is

IMMOHRTAL is Dillon Mohr, an Erie-raised, Pittsburgh-based CMO and rapper releasing an eleven-track debut album called Dance With The Delusional after years of doing the responsible thing first.

Who this is for

The initial audience is not every rap listener. It is a set of overlapping high-affinity groups:

- People in their late twenties and thirties who delayed a creative dream.
- Mac Miller listeners who value honesty, humor, damage, and craft together.
- Erie, 814, Pittsburgh, and Pennsylvania listeners who recognize the places and references.
- Independent hip-hop fans who care about bars, process, and the person behind the record.

- Marketing and creative professionals who understand the tension between promoting other people and exposing their own work.
- Fathers, friends, and grown adults trying to make room for art inside a real life.

The audience is buying participation before it is buying music. The offer is: get in early, judge the experiment honestly, choose what happens next, and hear the work before the public does.

Voice rules

- Confess, do not promote.
- Use specifics: age, Erie, 814, Pittsburgh, notebooks, 2023, Faces, Keev, the day job, the daughter.
- Be self-aware about Dillon, never ironic about the music.
- Use one clear action per post.
- Close campaign posts with IF NOT NOW, WHEN.
- Until real distribution links exist, say SOON. Never invent a release or streaming URL.

4. The content machine

Weekly input from Dillon

One 45 to 60 minute phone session supplies the week:

- Five direct-to-camera hooks, each delivered twice.
- Ten minutes answering audience questions.
- Five notebook or studio detail shots.
- Five workday shots and five night-session shots.
- One first-listen reaction.
- One location or relationship story: Erie, Pittsburgh, Keev, Mac, fatherhood, or work.
- One longer answer that can become LinkedIn, X, email, and a YouTube video.

Film vertically, use window light, keep the lens at eye level, leave one second before and after each take, and hold B roll longer than feels necessary. Clean audio matters more than cinematic polish.

Weekly output

- Four discovery videos, 15 to 45 seconds each.
- Two feed or carousel posts using the existing asset library.
- One 15 to 25 minute live session.
- Daily Instagram and Facebook Stories, typically three frames.
- Three native LinkedIn posts, two with video and one with an image or document carousel.
- Three to five X or Threads posts built from the same week's language.
- One email only when there is real news, a new preview, or a meaningful story.

The repeatable series

| Series | Job | Typical opening | Primary success signal |

|---|---|---|---|

| Delusion Diary | Make Dillon the story | "I am almost 29 and I decided to start rapping." | Watch retention and comments |

| First Listen | Provide social proof and emotion | "This is the first time Keev heard the final master." | Shares and rewatches |

| The Split | Make the CMO and rapper duality visual | "This was my day at noon and my night at midnight." | Profile visits and follows |

| Making It | Prove craft and progress | "This line took ten tries to land." | Saves and questions |

| The 814 / Pittsburgh | Own local identity | "Nobody thinks Erie when they think rap." | Local shares and press interest |

| Audience Verdict | Turn viewers into participants | "Play thirty seconds and tell me if I am delusional." | Comments and list signups |

| Sunday Session | Convert passive viewers into community | Live story, listening room, or Q and A | Repeat viewers and list growth |

Content ratio

- 50 percent Dillon speaking or reacting on camera.
- 20 percent process, studio, notebook, location, and relationship footage.
- 15 percent music-first clips with a human opening or voiceover.
- 10 percent carousels, photos, and branded statics.
- 5 percent direct announcements.

The 35 statics and 27 videos become a modular visual layer behind the human-led posts. They also cover days when capture falls short, but they do not become the default again.

5. Platform roles

TikTok

This is the fastest hook-testing surface. Publish direct-to-camera stories, first listens, reply videos, studio fragments, and local identity posts. Keep the production native and human. Use comments as the next script queue. Once a post wins organically, its creator-style format can become a Spark Ad test while keeping engagement attached to the original post.

Instagram

Reels handle discovery. Stories handle daily relationship and polls. Carousels provide saves and context. Lives deepen the connection. Pin three posts: who IMMOHRTAL is, the strongest song door, and the album or list invitation. Highlights should be START HERE, MUSIC, 814, MAKING IT, and LIVE.

YouTube

Shorts carry the four weekly vertical stories. Titles should name the idea, not merely the track. The official video and future visualizers become long-form conversion destinations. Community posts and comment replies can recycle audience questions. Compare Shorts with Shorts, not with long-form videos, and track engaged views and whether viewers chose to watch rather than swiping.

LinkedIn

This is not a side channel. The CMO angle is strongest here and can generate press, professional curiosity, and high-quality early listeners. Use the honest double-life story, lessons from marketing his own work, starting late, creative fear, and transparent results. Do not turn the music into a corporate case study. The vulnerability is the advantage.

X and Threads

Use concise confessions, lines from the process, Erie and Pittsburgh observations, and live reactions. One weekly thread can unpack a track or the public experiment. Images should support the post, not substitute for a reason to care.

Facebook

Cross-post Reels and Stories natively, then use Dillon's real network and relevant local communities carefully. No link dumping or group spam. A personal post about Erie, Pittsburgh, Keev, or starting late will travel better here than a generic album announcement.

Spotify and Apple Music

These become active after distribution is confirmed. Claim the artist profiles, complete bios and images, add the existing Spotify Canvases, and use one universal smart link. Pitch the lead single through Spotify for Artists at least seven days before release with full context, promotion plans, collaborators, location, and story. Never pay for guaranteed playlist placement. Apple Music for Artists can generate Linkfire-powered links and social assets after the release is delivered and the profile can be claimed.

Press, curators, and local ecosystem

Use the EPK and the story, not a mass blast. Segment outreach into Pittsburgh music, Erie and 814 press, marketing trades, independent hip-hop outlets, college radio, and legitimate curator platforms. Personalize the first paragraph and track every pitch, follow-up, response, and link. Do not use fake accounts, stream manipulation, or paid guaranteed placements.

6. The first 30 days

The attached `IMMOHRTAL_30_DAY_CONTENT_CALENDAR.csv` is an audience-building bridge starting July 16. It deliberately avoids a fake release countdown because no public release date or pre-save link is confirmed.

Days 1 to 3: unblock

1. Claim or verify `@immohrtal` on Instagram, TikTok, YouTube, X, Threads, and Facebook.
2. Apply the existing avatar and banners.
3. Use one bio everywhere: "CMO by day. Rapper after hours. Erie to Pittsburgh. Dance With The Delusional. IF NOT NOW, WHEN."
4. Put the live site in every profile until the smart link exists.
5. Activate GA4 and the Meta Pixel, then test `preview_play`, `gate_open`, `gate_signup`, and `epk_download`.
6. Connect the Netlify form to an ESP and activate the drafted three-email welcome sequence.
7. Choose the lead single, distributor, release date, and pre-save path.
8. Correct and approve the exact lyrics that may appear publicly.

Days 4 to 14: establish the character

- Publish the first four Delusion Diary and First Listen videos.
- Use the existing tracklist, carousel, Split cards, and real photos as supporting posts.
- Run two Sunday Sessions.
- Ask one clear question in every discovery post.
- Reply to every substantive comment within 24 hours.
- Start the weekly scorecard. Do not judge the strategy from one viral or dead post.

Days 15 to 30: find and multiply the winner

- Identify the top two hooks and top two story pillars.
- Make three variants of each winner by changing only the opening, length, or proof.
- Turn the best audience comment into a reply video.
- Publish the first transparent results post on LinkedIn and X.
- Build the first segmented press and curator list.
- If the release date is live, convert the next four weeks into a T minus 28 release runway.

7. Release sequence

Once the single and date are confirmed, use this relative schedule.

T minus 28 to T minus 15

- Announce the experiment and pre-save, not just the song.
- Publish three hook tests per week around the lead single.
- Collect first-listen reactions.
- Pitch local and marketing media using the EPK.
- Submit the unreleased lead single to Spotify editorial with complete context.

T minus 14 to T minus 1

- Increase to four or five short-form posts per week.
- Run one live preview per week.
- Publish the making-of, the personal reason, and the best friend or local story.
- Retarget site visitors and high-intent video viewers only after tracking is verified.
- Email the list once at T minus 7 and once at T minus 1.

Release day

- One direct-to-camera release post.
- One music-first Reel, TikTok, and Short with the strongest approved section.
- One personal LinkedIn post about shipping the thing.
- Stories throughout the day with the universal smart link.
- A short live session that evening.
- Ask for saves, follows, and sharing with one specific person, not generic streaming.

Release plus 1 to 28

- Keep the lead single alive through reactions, live performance, explanation, reply videos, and alternate hooks.
- Turn real milestones into proof posts.
- Retarget engaged viewers with the strongest organic creative.
- Use the data to choose the second single rather than choosing by preference alone.

8. Measurement and decision rules

The funnel is:

Reach → engaged view → profile visit → site click → preview play → gate signup → pre-save or DSP visit → stream → save → follow → share

Creative metrics

- Chose to view versus swiped away where available.
- Average watch time and completion rate.
- Shares and saves per reached viewer.
- Comments that demonstrate story or music interest.
- Profile visits and follows per post.

Business and fan metrics

- Link clicks by platform and campaign using UTMs.
- Preview plays.
- Gate signup conversion rate.
- Cost per gate signup once paid begins.
- Pre-saves when a real pre-save exists.
- Spotify and Apple listeners, saves, follows, playlist adds, and source of streams.
- Email open, click, reply, unsubscribe, and referral activity.

Weekly decisions

- Multiply: top-quartile post on retention plus a meaningful action. Make three variants.
- Keep learning: good retention but weak action. Change the CTA or landing path.
- Repackage: weak opening but strong comments from people who stayed. Replace the first two seconds.
- Stop: weak retention and weak action after two clean tests.
- Promote: only an organic winner with verified conversion tracking and a clear next action.

Avoid arbitrary universal thresholds at the start. Establish the first four-week baseline, then compare each format to its own platform and format history.

9. Paid scaling ladder

Stage 0: organic proof, $0 to $500 per month

Use the budget for basic production needs, captioning, and possibly an ESP. Run at least 12 to 20 human-led creative tests before meaningful paid spend. The goal is to find messages that work without buying attention.

Stage 1: controlled tests, approximately $1,000 to $1,500 per month

- Boost only the top two or three organic videos.
- Start with Meta Reels and TikTok Spark Ads.
- Test roughly $10 to $20 per creative per day for five to seven days.
- Separate cold discovery from warm retargeting.
- Optimize to `gate_signup` before release and to a verified smart-link or artist action after release.
- Exclude existing signups from acquisition campaigns.

Stage 2: repeatable scale, approximately $3,000 to $5,000 per month

Unlock only after multiple creative winners and a stable landing conversion rate exist. Increase spend gradually, keep 20 percent of budget for new creative tests, refresh hooks weekly, and cut ads when both retention and downstream conversion decline.

Paid media should amplify discovery and owned-audience growth. It should not be used to purchase streams blindly. A cheap video view with no profile visit, signup, save, or follow is not progress.

10. Retention, referral, and revenue

Retention

- Activate the drafted welcome sequence immediately after the ESP is connected.
- Send only when there is a real reason: private preview, release, video, live, story, or milestone.
- Ask for replies and favorite-track feedback. Those replies become research and content prompts.
- Tag contacts by entry source and track interest when possible.

Referral

- Every week, ask for one specific referral: a Mac listener, an 814 friend, a Pittsburgh music fan, or someone starting late.
- Invite the first 25 engaged people into a named early-listener group.
- Give early listeners previews, credits, private lives, or first access rather than fake scarcity.
- Feature fan reactions with permission.

Revenue

Revenue should follow audience proof. Initial options are direct support, limited merch tied to IF NOT NOW, WHEN, ticketed local events, and later physical editions. Do not rush merchandise before there is evidence that the phrase or visual system has real demand.

11. How Codex will help scale it

Codex becomes the operating layer between Dillon's raw weekly capture and a measured publishing system.

Every week

1. Inventory the new footage and label usable hooks, stories, B roll, reactions, and tracks.
2. Build the edit queue with exact opening, cut length, subtitles, end card, caption, platform, and CTA.
3. Draft native captions and titles in the approved IMMOHRTAL voice.
4. Check every asset for approved lyrics, release status, correct links, rights, and no accidental master-audio exposure.
5. Update the scheduler-ready calendar.
6. Read exported platform and site analytics into the scorecard.
7. Identify winners, losers, and the next three variants.
8. Prepare press, curator, email, and community drafts from the same winning story.

What Dillon supplies

- One weekly phone capture batch.
- Human-only account gates and approvals.
- Correct lyrics.
- Release and distributor decisions.
- Approval before anything is posted, emailed, pitched, advertised, or published externally.

What gets automated after the foundation works

- File naming and intake.
- Caption and format variants.
- Calendar generation.
- UTM link creation.
- Weekly scorecard rollups.
- Creative winner detection.
- First-draft reply videos and outreach follow-ups.

The goal is not to automate Dillon out of the content. It is to remove every repetitive task around the part only Dillon can do.

12. What we are deliberately not doing

- No fake followers, comments, accounts, or streams.
- No guaranteed playlist payments.
- No unapproved lyric quotes.
- No full unreleased masters on public surfaces.
- No ad spend before tracking and destination links work.
- No attempt to post equally on every platform every day.
- No new visual rebrand before the existing system gets a real distribution test.
- No merchandise inventory before audience demand is visible.

13. Open decisions, ranked

1. Lead single, distributor, public release date, and pre-save URL.
2. Whether the @immohrtal handles are claimed and accessible on each platform.

3. Current follower, average-view, email-list, and streaming baselines.

4. Monthly paid budget for the first 90 days.

5. Weekly time Dillon can commit to filming and lives.

6. Which lyrics are approved for public use.

7. Whether the welcome sequence is live and which ESP owns the list.

8. GA4, Meta Pixel, Search Console, and platform analytics access.

9. Whether King Keev and family are available and comfortable appearing.

10. Which personal family photos and stories are approved for public use.

These decisions change sequencing and spend, but they do not block the first week of human-led audience building in the attached calendar.

Immediate next move

Record the first Delusion Diary clip vertically:

> "I am a chief marketing officer. I market other people's stuff all day. Nobody knows I made a whole rap album."

Then speak naturally for 20 to 40 seconds about recording it in 2023 and waiting. End by asking which track people want to hear first. The finished post closes with IF NOT NOW, WHEN.
