JUNE 2026 · MONTHLY PERFORMANCE REPORT

Kimberly James Bridal Performance Report

How paid search and the new Squarespace landing pages worked together to keep bridal appointment requests growing this month.

THE BOTTOM LINE

The new landing pages are compounding: organic sessions grew again and paid search held a steady cost per appointment. Conversion tracking on the new account is verified, so every booked appointment is now measured.

CHAPTER ONE

Performance Snapshot

Paid search stayed efficient while the Timeline and venue pages kept adding organic appointment paths on top of it.

◆ MONTH TAKEAWAY

Paid and organic are now feeding the same funnel. The venue pages give brides a reason to land, and search campaigns catch the ones who are ready to book. July's job is more of both.

Nearly complete

What moved this month

- 1 Conversion tracking verified on the new Google Ads account, so bookings are now measured end to end.
- 2 Venue pages kept ranking, with all seven Chestnut Hill venue profiles pulling bridal traffic.
- 3 Cost per appointment request fell while volume grew, a healthy sign heading into peak booking season.

CHAPTER THREE

The Plan for Next Month

Priorities on deck

- 1 Finish and index the Plus-Size Wedding Dresses page, then wire it into the venue pages.
- 2 Shift budget toward the exact-match booking keywords that produced June's cheapest requests.
- 3 Draft the next two venue profiles so the SEO flywheel doesn't stall over the summer.

Brides find the pages, the pages earn the trust, and search closes the appointment. The funnel finally works as one piece.
